Monthly Commentary

In March we published a note titled 'We cannot direct the wind, but we can adjust the sails'. Granted, this sentiment holds true for fund managers at any stage in the market cycle but it has certainly never felt more pertinent than it does today.

By definition, active managers have the capacity to act, and indeed react, when the facts change, moving the pieces around the board to secure the best outcomes for our clients. As the saying goes, this is chess - not checkers.

We've remained active throughout the month with the main objective of adding selectively to our equity book. We have collected some investment trusts on very notable discounts to their net asset values, targeting a blend of global beta and technology. On the latter, we believe the world will accelerate its fascination and adoption of technology post Covid-19 and as such, are positioning ourselves to align with this sentiment.

We continue to stay underweight the US equity market, a decision driven by valuation, but increasingly so, better value elsewhere rather than anything too extreme in the US. We have also avoided long duration fixed income as we believe the inflationary forces will be at work, pushing yields up at the longer end, whilst equally so, undermining the quality of the issuance. We have also not added to anything too exotic, by way of Asia or Emerging Markets, as the valuations in the UK and Japan already offer tremendous upside, therefore we have decided against adopting any undue currency risks. As QE comes back on line, we are mindful to shore up our defences with a currency that cannot be debased so have moved to top up our Gold Bullion exposures, the majority of which is hedged back into GBP.

Above all, we remain committed to what brought us to the dance, our investment process, allowing us to cut through the noise, focus on the fundamentals and let the data drive our conviction, as opposed to our emotions.
